

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Sunday 14 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:

Today: cold, windy, patchy snow and ice. Monday: milder, brighter.

Today:

Most areas cloudy and feeling raw in very strong southeasterly winds. Patchy rain and snow at first with very icy surfaces possible across northern UK. Heavier rain later but turning much milder across Northern Ireland and the far west.

Tonight:

Rain, heavy for some, clearing all but the southeast. Broken cloud following but scattered heavy showers in the west. Much milder for most but still patchy frost in the northeast.

Monday:

Rain clearing the southeast then many areas bright at times but with some showers, mainly in the west and northwest. Evening rain for some. Noticeably milder and also less windy.

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:

Changeable with bands of rain and showers followed by brief settled spells, moving in on a brisk south-westerly wind. Coastal gales in the west, especially north-west, at times. Rather mild.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.